MARRAKECH, MOROCCO

It's hard not to feel a million miles from the city when lazing amongst the palm trees

why

Situated at the foot of the Atlas Mountains, the imperial city of Marrakech is truly an assault on the senses – a huge, fascinating cultural hub that's as packed with history as it is ornately beautiful. Best visited in the cooler months between September and May, the city's equal mix of mystique and magnetism make it an ideal autumn getaway.

For ecological decadence we love luxury boutique hotel Les Cinq Djellabas, ten beautiful private lodges set around an exotic glassy pool in the heart of the city's exclusive Palmeraie district. Designed by the late Thierry Isnardon, the resort is only 20 minutes from the nearest knot of bustling street markets, although it's hard not to feel a million miles from everywhere when lazing amongst the palm trees and lush gardens with their unexpected snow-capped mountain views.
